

Faker \(gamer\) - Wikipedia

For the microsite, I plan on making it about the Wikipedia article for Faker (gamer). Lee Sang-hyeok, or “Faker”, is a professional Korean gamer known for being one of the greatest League of Legends players of all time. T1 is the organization that Faker plays for and partially owns. Their color scheme of T1 is modern, with black, white, and red being the main color scheme. Too much black and red would be messy, so the website would be primarily white with black and red accents. I know one way to make the website would be to mimic the League of Legends interface, but I think that might be confusing and a hard color scheme to work with, so I will try to make things more simple.

The first page might be a large picture of him, maybe with some quotes about him and a navigational tab. After the user scrolls, it would lead to his general information and biography. The side navigation bar would have a button that would lead back to the main page, a button to the career page, and a third button that would lead to his accomplishments and awards page. The main page and the career page would probably be the longest, since he’s been active for 10 years and has achieved a lot in that time.

I understand not a lot of people would know him if they’re not into gaming or esports, but I want to present the information in a clean, engaging way so that viewers can understand how impressive he is, and fans could get a general summary of his career.
